DILEMMA

Your mum has asked you to come straight home from school to babysit your sister so she can go to work. Your friend Sam persuades you to take a longer route home so he can pick up something from a friend's house. Sam goes in and after a while comes out, you find out he's picked up weed for his brother. You don't get home in time and your mum is late for work. She asks where you've been. What do you say?

DILEMMA

It's the end of year prom. You go to a friends house and have a few drinks before heading out to the prom. The deputy head notices you're a bit unsteady on your feet and calls you over. Before you get there, a group of rowdy boys catch his attention and you slip away and avoid him all night. There is a strict no alcohol policy and if the deputy thinks you've been drinking he'll call home and your Dad would ground you for the whole summer. But if you go to your Dad first he might be more chilled. What do you do?

DILEMMA

You're at the park and your mate Charlie turns up selling fireworks. You buy a small rocket and set it off. Instead of going straight up it veers off and crashes on to the balcony of a nearby block of flats. It explodes with a small bang on the balcony and everyone scatters. You're slightly in shock so are the last to get away but before you leave you notice a small flame on the balcony. You don't know who lives there or if anyone is home. What do you do?

DILEMMA

At the local youth club, the youth workers put on a cooking night. It's really popular and there are lots of people in and out of the kitchen. While you're cooking you notice one of the boys take a knife and tuck it into his coat while the youth worker's back is turned. He doesn't often come to the youth club and usually hangs about smoking weed with his group of mates. You decide not to say anything as you don't want any trouble with that group. Next week the youth club sends out a letter to everyone who was there saying that a knife got stolen and if anyone knows anything. What do you do?

DILEMMA

It's not long till Christmas and you haven't got any presents for your friends and family yet. You're walking home and as you pass the bank you notice money hanging out of the cash machine. You look around and there's no one about, curious you take the money and count it: £50. The bank doesn't open until after the weekend so you can't return it yet. If you leave it the owner might come back and get it or someone else might pick it up. You take the money home for now.

DILEMMA

You're walking with your mate along the street and pass a homeless man curled up in a doorway asleep smelling of alcohol. He has left his hat out to collect change from passers by. There is a crumpled fiver lying next to the hat. It's hard to tell if someone has given to the homeless man or if it's just fallen out of someone's pocket. What do you do?
